VAGINAL SPECULUM

The vaginal speculum that most OB/GYN practitioners use today has a long history, dating back to ancient Rome. The doctors that lived in Pompeii before the Vesuvius eruption were the first to use and manufacture this medical tool. Original instruments were excavated from their ruins in 1770 at a location known by archeologists as The House of the Surgeon¹, named for the amount of surgical instruments unearthed at the site. Primitive vaginal specula date back to the year 97 A.D. They were manually operated by a corkscrew, and composed of dovetailed valves that opened and closed to allow detailed examination. Their design is similar to the ones used today.
